MEETING WITH TIP O'NEILL
AND HOUSE LEADERS
Thursday, May 12, 1977
10:00 a.m. (20 minutes)
The Cabinet Room

From: Zbigniew Brzezinski 23

I. PURPOSE

To reach agreement with the House leadership on the basic approach to be taken by the Administration and Congress on the development of intelligence legislation.

II. BACKGROUND, PARTICIPANTS & PRESS PLAN

- A. Background: This is the first of two meetings with Congressional leaders on the same subjects (Friday morning you will meet with the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.) The House has lagged considerably behind the Senate in organizing itself to deal effectively with intelligence problems and generally has found it difficult to deal with foreign intelligence activities in a responsible manner. Tip O'Neill is sensitive to this problem and has indicated a willingness to assume firm leadership. The support of responsible House leaders will be essential to the success of any legislative initiatives you may wish to pursue as a result of the study of the mission and structure of the Intelligence Community being conducted under PRM/NSC-11.
- B. Participants: Tip O'Neill and members of the House he selects (names supplied separately), Vice President Mondale, Stan Turner, Zbigniew Brzezinski, David Aaron, Samuel Hoskinson (NSC Staff), Frederick Baron (Attorney General's Staff).
- C. Press Plan: White House photographer. Depending on how this meeting and the one with the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence turn out, you or the Vice President may wish to issue a statement on both meetings and answer questions from the press after the latter meeting on Friday morning.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

III. TALKING POINTS

Your suggested talking points are prefaced by a short background paragraph on each of the major topics that may be discussed.

1. Opening remarks. (An appropriate way to begin this discussion would be to inform the House leaders of the initiatives you have taken thus far with respect to U.S. foreign intelligence activities.)

- I have taken several initiatives to set the Intelligence Community reform process in motion.

- One of the first acts of this Administration was to initiate a comprehensive review of ongoing sensitive operational activities to make sure nothing improper by our standards was going on.

- I also commissioned through the NSC system a comprehensive study of the mission and structure of the entire Intelligence Community which will be completed within a month.

- You are, of course, aware of the proposed foreign intelligence electronic surveillance legislation developed at the lead of the Justice Department.

- The Intelligence Oversight Board has recently been strengthened with new leadership.

- We have now almost reached the point where we will need the help of Congress if important structural reforms are to be undertaken.

2. Reform Legislation. (The Vice President and Stan Turner have recommended and you have approved acceptance of the broad principle of intelligence legislation. There is at the moment at least one legislative reform effort sponsored by Representative Dellums and undoubtedly will be others. While the House leadership is unlikely to support any of these efforts which are unacceptable to the Administration, it will also be important to have their strong support for the legislative reform package we develop as a result of PRM/NSC-11. We therefore, need the agreement of the Speaker and other leaders now to our approach.)

- We have made a basic decision that there should be statutory charters defining the responsibilities and authorities of and establishing appropriate controls on U.S. foreign intelligence activities.

- This statutory authority, however, should not be so detailed on organizational and administrative matters as to hamper the bureaucratic flexibility and effectiveness of our intelligence agencies in performing lawful and properly controlled assignments.
 - Broad statutory authority should be supplemented by detailed guidelines that receive the careful oversight of Congress and would give the country responsible as well a responsive, intelligence agency.
 - Our respective efforts to develop appropriate intelligence legislation should be complementary to the greatest extent possible.
- I urge that the House hold up on serious consideration of charter legislation until the Administration has completed its considered study of the problem. I will make the same point to the Senate leadership and Select Committee on Intelligence tomorrow morning.
- We favor timing along the following lines:
- | | |
|----------------|---|
| June | Completion of Administration study |
| July-September | Consultations with key Congressional Committees aimed at reaching agreement on a legislative package. |
| September 30 | Introduction of legislation |
- The Administration will not act unilaterally. Once our study is completed, we will move only in closest consultation with Congress to revise the existing Executive Order on foreign intelligence activities (E. O. 11905) if that should be required in addition to legislative initiative.
3. Congressional Committee Structure. (Our preference has been for one joint Senate-House Committee with exclusive jurisdiction over all foreign intelligence legislation and full oversight responsibility as the exclusive recipient in Congress of sensitive operational details and reporting on covert operations. This is apparently not politically possible--at least for now--but the Speaker has supported creation of a House Select Committee on Intelligence as a counterpart to the Senate Select Committee. This is a step in the right direction if it reduces the number of Committees (7) presently involved in Congressional oversight.)

- Reform of the intelligence structure of the Executive Branch should be paralleled by reform of the Congressional Committee structure for exercising legislative responsibilities in the foreign intelligence field.
 - My preference would be for a single House-Senate Joint Committee with exclusive jurisdiction over all foreign intelligence legislative activity and full oversight responsibility.
 - I realize that the goal may not be feasible now, however, and that efforts are underway to create a House Select Committee as a counterpart to the Senate Select Committee. This would be a useful step forward provided that the new House Select Committee:
 - Assumes at least some of the jurisdiction that is presently spread among three committees in the House, especially regarding disclosure of highly sensitive operational information concerning covert action and clandestine collection;
 - Is exempted from Rule 11 (which provides that any member of the House can have access to the records of any committee.)
4. Intelligence Community Budget. (The Senate Select Committee is split on the issue of public disclosure of the aggregate figure for the National Foreign Intelligence Program and will ask your views on the subject on Friday. There are similar differences of opinion among the House leadership and it would be interesting to have their views.)
- I am aware of differing points of view concerning public disclosure of Intelligence Community budget figures. How do you see this problem?
5. PFIAB and IOB. (The recent announcement of the abolishment of your Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board and new appointments to the Intelligence Oversight Board apparently came as a surprise to some in Congress and you may be asked for a clarification.)
- PFIAB is a classic case of an institution which for many years served a very useful purpose but whose functions came to be more effectively performed by new organizations within the Intelligence Community itself, through the National Security Council system and by the Congressional oversight process.

- I believe that strong and effective oversight of the Intelligence Community should be conducted by both the Legislative and Executive Branches. The IOB concept has proven itself and I have further strengthened its operation by the careful selection and appointment of three outstanding individuals in whom I have full confidence. Each brings a different background and perspective to the job.
6. "Leak" Legislation. (It is known on the Hill that there are some apparent differences of opinion within the Administration on the issue of legal sanctions to enforce the protection of intelligence sources and methods. If asked, I recommend that you be non-committal for now.)
- The entire matter of protecting sensitive information is being studied by a special NSC system subcommittee chaired by the Attorney General as part of our overall Intelligence Community study. Once that report is complete, we intend to consult actively with the Congress on how to proceed.
 - Different points of view exist within the Administration on this highly controversial subject just like they do in the Congress. I in fact encourage free debate and exchange of views among my principal advisors on the most difficult issues.

THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS
50 EAST NORTH TEMPLE STREET
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH 84150

SPENCER W. KIMBALL, PRESIDENT

April 28, 1977

Dear Mr. President:

I am writing to you in response to your telephone call on Sunday, April 17, 1977, to my Second Counselor, President Marion G. Romney. I deeply regret that it was not my privilege to speak with you personally. As President Romney advised you, your call found us conducting a Church meeting of about 2,000 people in Southern Utah. I was at the pulpit speaking to this large congregation when word came that you were on the telephone. You very kindly invited President Romney to speak with you in my place.

We very much appreciate your interest in our great missionary program, and we are honored that you would take time out of your extremely busy schedule and your concern with weighty affairs of state, both foreign and domestic, to call and talk with us personally about something so dear to our hearts.

As President Romney informed you, we have been commissioned by the Master, Himself, both through ancient scripture and modern revelation, to go "...into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Matthew 16:15-18). As a result, we have been a missionary Church since our organization April 6, 1830. We now have 26,000 missionaries serving full time at their own expense throughout the free world. But more than that, every member is a missionary. All our members try to deport themselves in such a way that they may be an example of right living to their friends and neighbors, and thus seek an opportunity to share with them the Gospel of Jesus Christ as we know it.

You indicated to President Romney that you were very interested, and indeed inspired, by our program, and invited us to send you any further information on our missionary activities. I am, therefore, enclosing with this letter a recap of the data given you over the phone by President Romney, together with some additional material which may be of help to you.

The President

President

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: FRANK MOORE F.M.

After the meeting this morning, the Speaker told me you were absolutely fantastic. He said he wished the Democratic Caucus could hear just a small part of what you had to say this morning.

One opportunity to do this would be at the ceremony this afternoon for the unveiling of Chairman Rodino's portrait. The ceremony will begin at 5:00 p.m. and is in room 2141 of the Rayburn building. It would require approximately 45 minutes, you could say a few words about immigrants and human rights and return to the White House. Rosalynn will be attending and I believe the Vice President is planning to attend.

If you decide against a personal appearance, I would like to arrange a phone call.

Re: Locks and Dam 26/

THE WHITE HOUSE

MEMORANDUM FOR:

THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

STU EIZENSTAT Stu

SUBJECT: Locks and Dam 26/Waterway User
Charges

*Stu -
Talked to
Brock - 1250 feet -
9 ft - User charge
J*

BACKGROUND

After receiving guidance from you, Secretary Adams stated to the Senate Public Works Committee that the Administration favors postponement of authorization for a new lock and dam and the imposition of waterway user charges via a fuel tax.

The subcommittee rejected the Administration position on both issues, reporting out a bill which provides for a) $420 million for a new lock and dam at the new site; b) the imposition of user charges by administrative action in the Department of Transportation subject to the approval of Congress; and c) insufficient comprehensive planning on the river systems. There is no sill depth limitation.

The Senate Commerce Committee, which shares jurisdiction, meets tomorrow to mark up the bill. It appears that a clear restatement of our position is necessary. Secretary Adams feels that we should indicate to the Committee that we can accept a bill authorizing a new facility if, and only if, it provides for the imposition of inland waterway user fees.

While I agree with the thrust of Secretary Adams' recommendation, it would imply, by indirection, that you would sign a bill which authorized the $420 million facility if user fees are included. This might be an optimal outcome, but you might prefer to preserve some leeway. You have not previously approved such a new facility and might want to have a meeting with Secretary Adams before you do so.

Electrostatic Copy Made
for Preservation Purposes

There are two options:

1) Direct Secretary Adams to reiterate our three-point position to the Commerce and Public Works Committees:

- a. 18-24 month study necessary to decide between repair and replacement;
- b. comprehensive planning on the upper Mississippi and Illinois Rivers;
- c. comprehensive user fee system.

This would indicate we are not prepared to compromise at this point. He would imply a veto if any of your original demands were unmet, but leave some flexibility.

2) Direct Secretary Adams to reiterate our position on user fees, but imply flexibility on the new facility if user fees are tied to it. Thus Secretary Adams could state to the Committee that the Administration would not accept a bill authorizing a new facility without user fees included.

I think you should call Secretary Adams today before making a decision.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: Locks and Dam 26/Waterway
User Charges

The Senate Commerce Committee, which shares jurisdiction with the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, is scheduled to meet this Thursday, May 12, to act on legislation that would authorize a new lock and dam at Alton, Illinois, and a system of user charges for the Nation's waterway transportation system. Prevailing sentiment in the Committee suggests that, while it is likely to favor the lock and dam authorization, the user charge provisions stand a good chance of being dropped. Moreover, it seems highly likely that the Locks and Dam 26 legislation, with or without user charge provisions, will be appended on the Senate floor to the omnibus water resources authorization bill which, of course, enjoys strong and broad political support in the Congress.

If Locks and Dam 26 construction authorization were to be passed without user charge provisions, I would recommend that you veto it. If you agree, I propose that we immediately send a very strong signal to the Senate that you would give the most serious consideration to vetoing any bill that does not include waterway user charges. While I am not sure that it also merits a veto threat, I think we should make clear a strong preference for the Administration position of carrying out a series of engineering tests on the dam before making a decision between replacement and rehabilitation. It is most important that we act promptly in view of the Senate Commerce Committee's Thursday meeting, at which time the issue may well be decided.

MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT

FROM: LONDON BUTLER LB
DATE: MAY 11, 1977
SUBJECT: MEETING WITH ARNOLD MILLER, 11:30am
THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1977

Arnold Miller, President of the United Mine Workers, requested this meeting to discuss "general issues." Miller is a West Virginia native who was elected over incumbent Tony Boyle in a court-ordered election in 1972. Here are some possible talking points:

1. UMW elections.

Miller is up for reelection on June 15; the race is bitter and divisive. You may want to express your hope that the race will be run in a way that will minimize labor disruptions and losses in the production of coal.

Because of the existing election turmoil and the high rate of wildcat strikes, you should avoid any statements which might tend to draw you into any internal union controversy.

Miller's opponents in the election are Harry Patrick, Secretary-Treasurer of the UMW; and Lee Roy Patterson, an Executive Board member who is considered to be part of the old Tony Boyle faction.

You should know that Patrick has asked the Department of Labor to run the June 15 election. Secretary Marshall has the request under consideration, but has not yet responded.

2. Upcoming negotiations with the coal industry.

The national coal contract expires December 4 of this year. You may want to urge Miller to have the UMW begin negotiations as soon as possible so that many of the technical and non-economic issues can be resolved. Failure to begin early may prolong what will probably be a lengthy strike.

Electrostatic Copy Made
for Preservation Purposes

Again, any comments about the 1977 contract negotiations should be very limited, since the union and the industry have historically resented government involvement in their collective bargaining.

3. Energy program.

You may want to ask Miller to work closely with Dr. Schlesinger's staff as they develop further our coal policies in the energy program.

Mr. Miller has been invited to attend the Thursday performance of the National Symphony in the Concert Hall at the Kennedy Center and to be seated in the Presidential box, and he may thank you for the invitation.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: JIM FALLOWS JW

SUBJECT: Swearing in of Leonel Castillo, Gracilia Olivarez,
Alan Campbell and Jay Solomon

1) Some people may think you're swearing all 4 in at once because you've gotten accustomed to group meetings in Europe. As a matter of fact, the reason is not only that these four show the range of talent you've brought into the administration--people of different ages and backgrounds--but also that their tasks illustrate the dual challenge the administration faces.

You've said many times that there's no contradiction between efficiency and compassion--that the government can serve people's needs best by working more efficiently. Jay Solomon, the new head of the General Services Administration, and Alan Campbell, the new head of the Civil Service Commission, will help you make the government more efficient, while Leonel Castillo, the new director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and Gracilia Olivarez, the new director of the Community Services Administration, will help you cope with some of the most difficult human questions our country faces.

2) There are about 100 very proud Mexican-Americans attending this swearing-in. Leonel Castillo, and Gracilia Olivarez are well known and highly-respected members of the Hispanic Community. You admire them both and have complete confidence in their abilities. You could point out that both of them feel very strongly about placing well-qualified Hispanics in positions of authority. You are demonstrating your commitment to their goals by appointing them and trust they will fill positions in their own domain with more well-qualified, but under-represented, Hispanics.

3) Castillo has been a public servant as the former comptroller of the City of Houston--an elected position putting him in charge of the city's finances. He has already proven his skills as a manager and will put these talents to good use at the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Our immigration policy is now one of the major questions we have to resolve; your domestic policy staff is at work now developing recommendations. There could be no one better than Castillo to head the service at this difficult time.

4) One of the things that made you know that Castillo was your kind of guy was his unbelievable thriftiness. His family always buys day-old bread, and his wife cuts his hair. (Yesterday he confirmed she still does this--the Washington hair stylists hold no attraction for him.) He goes around the Immigration & Naturalization offices turning off unnecessary lights. This is a good omen for a budget-conscious administration. In fact, if Bert Lance isn't careful, he may have some competition for the head of OMB.

5) It is particularly nice to see a woman Hispanic heading up the Community Services Administration. As the former director of State planning for New Mexico, she has been a long-time activist in the Mexican-American community. She has proven that women can and do function well in the highest levels of government. Olivarez distinguished herself early as the first woman to graduate from Notre Dame Law School. She went on to become a professor of law at the University of New Mexico. Olivarez, who has been a director of state-wide poverty programs in Arizona, comes from a poor family herself so she understands first-hand the meaning of poverty and how hard it can be to just survive, much less excel educationally and professionally, as she has.

6) Alan Campbell also faces a difficult challenge--to make sure that the civil service system brings out the best in people's abilities, rather than being satisfied with the least; that the government gives the taxpayer a fair return for the dollars it takes; and that public servants are proud of their work.

As a distinguished public administrator, ^{Alan}Campbell is a good man for this job. You know that the University of Texas, where he had just started as director of the LBJ School of Public Affairs, is said to see him go, but--as you told your Texan friends when Bob Strauss became your Special Trade Representative--their state's loss is the nation's gain.

7) Jay Solomon has your complete confidence in heading up the GSA. He knows about the problems he'll have to deal with, having spent 16 years on the Chattanooga Housing Authority. You know that he shares your ideas about never wasting anything. He wants the GSA to become a first-rate operation and also wants people to be able to say "It's easy to do business with us." You are confident Solomon is highly capable of zero-based budgeting.

Solomon's two children, Joel and Linda, are attending the swearing-in. Both worked to help you get elected and you're delighted to see them here at the White House. A month or two ago Time Magazine ran a picture of you kissing a young lady. You can reveal now that she was Linda Solomon.

MEMORANDUM

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

THE PRESIDENT HAS SEEN.

May 9, 1977

To: The President

From: Evan Dobelle ESD

Pursuant to your comment earlier that you "do not like to give pictures", may I recommend we order the attached book (cost of $60 - less in quantity) which is now basically equal to a framed picture ($56 as opposed to $218 before we switched from sterling silver to polished pewter).

Visiting heads of state receive photo albums anyway leaving the only framed pictures to be that of newly credentialed foreign Ambassadors taken in Oval Office ceremony.
